the particular - all the language and "carefully defined" terms of philosophy become useless as collective and oral definitions already exist, post-commercial filtrations, and mutations of the monotheizing culture mechanism; the use of words, what they might mean is all that matters - that one person could attribute a particular definition, could stake their life on it, is the most important instance of that word - insofar as its lived investment measures its value; thus the relatively poetic/metaphorical/"mad" in its referent, or rather in its alternative dissolution or linguistic discarding. the well-defined term feeds back on a principal of what doesn't cohere, what lives and disrupts it.

history as "history of great men" has nothing to do with an actuality, but rather a bizarre moral choice of a highly selective nature that is emphatically particular to our culture the Enlightenment has “long been hailed as the foundation of modern Western political and intellectual culture”.

Daniel Brewer, The Enlightenment Past: reconstructing eighteenth-century French thought (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2008)

it is with these ideas that we explode these ideas - transgression, yes, ultimately alternatives are needed, but philosophy is not in the realm of praxis, it is in the realm of a useless techne, it engages only with the linguistic-technical extraction of the essence of an age. by writing, we do not change an age, rather there is an onus to find a vocabulary that both closely represents and mimics its problems, and in turn inverts those problems in a form close to their actuality, in a way that works to combat them.

the supplicant tuft and microphotograph - as erotics. as a the microphotograph is no longer the simple doubling of humiliation, or the flinging of ectomy - the miniaturized symbol of the jubilation of silver and blankness - of the siderean replete and devious. expounded, dilate.

already found in little, in stun and saccharine, the highlighted jitter is accounted for in a cappella and sequent that objectivizes the anarchic nature of what was the stretched and bent inexactness. informed, automatic. already we have a frontal truss that appears materialistically.

biomedia misses the real tension between the process of science, ever wet and imprecisely unpredictable, and simulatory hyperlogics - which is not symbiotic, but rather a pretensile interface close-muffling its anti-thesis through a failed yet persistent hypermodulatory projection.

the refiguration in hermione is a work of re-evaluating time. not time, no, coasts, shirking. already the postulate that the self reigns the most important was apparent in an enlightened yet pathetic reply. this sourceless, this embracer, was found by hermione to work against time. for instance - through the frankenstein experiment her enlightened and socially-aware shakespeare clone fear was exfoliated. this placement is more or less direct. however, a re-placement, or the lack of the affirmation, this material impregnation - as an anti-resolution - figured the most informed and jitter, dust. the consideration, the innovator in science is the one who can correspond its language to his/her own tuition and potential imaginings - as is one who understands another culture, another person - to think of nonsense is itself nonsense - each word has meaning only insofar as it is tied to materiality, and subjects - every addendum has a meaning, the question is for whom insofar as validation constitutes all we might ever be able to term as knowledge, and discriminatory discretion a mode of isolation - a projected language that can only meaningfully turn upon its user the focus on affect discounts that there may be little or no affect at all, that the relation is not primarily computer-human in all its potential evocations, but human first (or "computer first" in its little computer world) and then insofar as there is engagement there is an interaction - what potential engagements the body and person may offer defines new media likewise the hollywood movie - ideally it is immersive, it creates the illusion of primacy, that it exists then you, yet the physical fact remains that the viewer can (body-abling) move away - its affective content is first predicated by a physical placement in front of its area of having that potential affect. once there, the results can lack affect, or include anti-emotions that may or may not fit into its vague precepts.

our history of science is one of technics - how can we assert that there is absolutely no science before writing and then some of it with writing? it is in experimental action that science resides ultimately - its codification is its death; the history of science will always be too late, catching ideas once they have become inert - it is a negative topography of the imaginative lived potentials that gave it possibility.

the camera pans out on the crowd. it seems from some angles, they are comprised mostly of humans - from others, it is a sort of continual blur, a series of lines that merge into the floor. part of the ship, part of the crew.

although the painting projection soon blows a fuse, the scene does not change, the hankering of synthesis and fingernails.

the outlining of the biggest loser - it is not that people watch and decide they must be like these people - rather this is an iconography of irony, of malaise and disgust - idols are erected despite themselves - the appreciation is twofold - one is in the critico-pluralistic engagement in the show (who should have one, who's more worthy than who), the second in an (equally pluralistic) denouncement of the show itself - both of these are distanced, ironic, non-participatory - this is a realism - the viewer never actually participates in the show's process - however his/her critical engagement ensures its existence. pluralism is ensured by just this metaparticipation - no point of view (production language / use language) actually participates in the show's process, thus any point of view is possible. it is the straggling disgust of the alienated/powerless/young whose preceptual information is devalorized in favour of a technical faux-simulacrum of the process of infotainment-education.

the engagement of two - a question of knowing everything outside of the two - inverse making of attraction (through opposition) - the ever-taboo life-process, synonymous with the total attraction/acceptance/dynamism of love; dissolution mirrors the ecstasy of the active paradox - only total acceptance can deal with loss (only love with death; - not detachment but loving engagement - which may need detachment as a precursor) the calculating cruelty that dissects the da vincian corpse - disaffectedness in the face of the atrocious. the dissection is the ultimate scientific symbol - the difference between science and non-science is not any objectivity, or any privileged form of specialized knowledge - but rather a denial to fully engage, a death-in-life-ness, a severe fear, a cut-off, a denial and break with the real, an inability to cope with the real - the scientific move is the technical move that calls for a return to understand its break - that is fueled by the corpse that leads it to break it is the revolutionary, grotesque, unbearable, unbelievable and taboo-ignorance-filled experience of the corpse that constitutes the moment of tangential informatics - tomes and tomes of work trying to use language to eliminate death - to embody death in life; the artist - the source - the participant and loving mother - these engage and accept the grotesquery - the technoscientific use it to construct other things, to construct worlds and toys and buildings the crucial moments of science are the moments of interface with the real - the generative moments of the imagination - the internalization of the toy into what brought it about - the best scientist does not merely create more toys in the mold of the toymaster, but changes just what is being made. s/he returns to the corpse, which effaces all technical structures, violates them and undermines them and forces a new generation of structures the da vincian corpse is the representative of taboo - of the transgression that is necessary for science to take place - of the revolutionary moment that makes up its lakatosian core - and not the death-enveloped, technically-bound elements of their protective belt - this is the work of machines the poet is not central, rather s/he is a kind of idiot who cannot escape the most atrocious moments - does not know how - listen closely to the idiot, for it is in the moments of atrocious engagement that everything we later misinterpret as knowledge is brought into being.

rather than a simple philosophy, an admission instead that all philosophy is a deadening of the most vital philosophy which is a life, despite it having potentially no knowledge of "philosophy" as such in no way is embodiment an anti-realist statement, but rather ultra-realist that first must grapple with the most inevitable mach - his biological physics - crucial as a generative form that is the nascence of einsteinian relativity, the anti-mechanistic, the logical positivist (and more - process, history, critical science) - he contains these but in a form that is in-formation - he is the source and primary reference for these stieglar, like foucault, is severely symptomatic of the western tracing of the western in the last _____ years (400 or less - anything part of the euro-modern period); while this is helpful, a critical tool even, it once again serves to have no necessity for reference elsewhere, except as total ideal (or totally ignored) (see its orientalist settings) canguilhem - imagine the atrocity of health as the "rational" - that is, what is post-hoc built on language - the marriage of word to word with filtered secondary real-reference - the scholastic system as body structure health as a tracing or untracing - yet whose foundations is the ultimate scientific interface - the terror (and lust) of the human body, what it contains; spirituality is not a transcendence of this, but rather an unwitting expression of it (in any terms - to the most metaphorically bizarre and outlandish) - reflecting ultimately it - whether catastrophic or serene.
